Show biz celebs told: PDEA is watching you

By Tere Quimondo

NOT JUST THE KIDS are watching showbiz stars. Agents of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) are watching celebs, too. Especially if they are suspected drug users.

"I know the people [are] just laughing at us. They think we're joking. But we're not,"

Quimondo said.

THE ALLIES OF FORMER PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO IN PAMPANGA have yet to hear it straight from her mouth, but without official word—and even with strong denials from Palace officials—they welcomed the idea of her contesting Pampanga's second district seat.

"As a Pampangan, I certainly favor [Mrs. Arroyo's] continued service and leadership in government in whatever capacity, especially as it concerns Pampanga," said Rep. Ramon Gonzalez, of the third district.

He was campaigning on an Inquirer

Drug firms race to make first A(H1N1) flu vaccine

LONDON—BIRTH SWINE FLU NOW an official pandemic, the race is on among drugmakers to produce a vaccine.

GlaxoSmithKline said on Thursday after the World Health Organization declared a global flu epidemic that it would be ready within weeks to begin large-scale vaccine production.

Sanofi-Sintaris also said it had started working on its own version.

On Friday, Swiss pharma giant Novartis announced it had created an experimental vaccine that had not been tested on people. Novartis' vaccine was made via a cell-based technology that may prove faster than the traditional way of making vaccines, which relies on chicken eggs.

The UN health agency noted its global alert to a maximum six on Thursday, saying it had reached pandemic status because of its geographical spread.

WHO Director General Margaret Chan said the declaration of a "modern" pandemic should not spark panic and did not mean the A(H1N1) (swine flu) death toll would rise sharply.

She said making the alert "means that the world is moving into the early

Ping on why Raul sacked: 2 mortal sins

By Michael Llan Ulas and TJ Burganio

SIN. DANFLO LACSON ALLEGEDLY struck a deal with Malacanan that secured the directorship of Raul Gonzalez. Tuesday, Lacson turned the tables on the former justice secretary.

In an interview yesterday with Goly Ramo on radio station dZL, Lacson declared that he had never struck a deal with Malacanan over the celebrated double murder case of politician Salvador "Baboy" Daza and his driver Emmanuel Carballo.

In the radio interview, Lacson broke his silence for the first time since Gonzalez was sacked and quickly replaced by Solicitor General Aguirre Desrosiers.

Asked whether Gonzalez's fate was part of the bargain, the senator said to Filipinos: "From the very beginning,"

US couple retires in Corregidor to honor father who fought there

By Rose Harper Alonso Contributor

WHILE MANY DREAM OF RETIRING on a private island in the Philippines with long stretches of deserted fine, white sand beaches or enjoying a luxury resort lifestyle still close to where the action is, an American couple has chosen to do the unusual.

Steve Kwiecinski, 57, a retired computer programmer and his wife, Maria, 54, a retired physical therapist assistant, left Michigan in 2008 to start a new life on Corregidor, the island fortress that has become a national shrine as a symbol of the determined resistance of its Filipino and American defenders against the invading Japanese in World War II. "The island, also known as the 'The Rock' because of its rocky landscape and heavy fortifications, holds a special place in the hearts of the Kwiecinskis."

"We moved to Corregidor to pay tribute to my father, who loved Corregidor."

HOME ON THE ROCK Steve and Maria Kwiecinski arrived on Corregidor Island in 2008 with only 4 suitcases but are here to stay for its beautiful beaches and vistas, for the sound of birds when they wake up and for deeply sentimental reasons.

The Mabuhay Guides make P4,000 each day touring visitors around the walled city of Intramuros, Manila's oldest town (Iloilo and Iloilo and yes, Iloilo included).

Dressed in crisp gray and mustard-yellow, 21 Philippine travel guides in place to explore little-known sights of history, take foreign VIPs to famous tourist spots and hook them in with stories of yore, pushing for a "beautiful Philippines" for the world to behold.

The "Mabuhay Guides" is an identity they put on their right chest, one passionate about Philippine history and its rich cultural heritage and the shared hope to put the country on the world tourism map.

Abu Sayyaf kills 5 Marines

MARINA-ARMED EXTREMISTS holding in Indian Red Cross workers captive yesterday attacked a military outpost in Jolo, killing 5 soldiers and wounding 11 others, military officials said.

About 40 armed men believed to be members of the Islamic Abu Sayyaf group attacked a group of Marines and special operations police pursuing them inside Barangay area in Jolo Island, said Marine spokesman Lt. Col. Edgar Arevalo.

"They were treacherously fired upon," Arevalo said.

In addition, the rebels, who carried with high-powered weapons and grenades, also killed an Indonesian member of Red Cross.

Arevalo said government troops were pursuing the attackers.

There was no word on Red Cross worker Eugenio Yegor, who is suffering from hypothermia because he stayed in the cold day in captivity yesterday.

On Thursday, Marines attacked an Abu Sayyaf stronghold near Jolo and were shot in the leg.

Two Marines and eight Abu Sayyaf fighters were killed in the fighting, including two sons of Abu Sayyaf commander Abu Paik Jandani and a son of another commander, Al-hadi Farid.

Yegor was one of three Indonesian members of the Red Cross (IRC) workers killed yesterday in Jolo on June 13. The Abu Sayyaf group, also said to have links to the regional terrorist network Jaish al-Islam, have freed the two others—Filipino Mary Ann Lacaba and Swiss Andreas Boser.

In a statement Thursday, IRC Asia-Pacific operations chief Mark MacMillan appealed to the kidnappers to release Yegor "safe and sound, unconditionally and without delay."

He said Yegor last called his wife on June 1.

"We are of course extremely concerned about Eugenio's safety and well-being. It is very troubling and frustrating to learn that his wife remains uncontacted after almost five months," he said. The Abu Sayyaf, said to have about 900 fighters, is an offshoot of the United States list of terrorist organizations because of its al-Qaida links and many notorious attacks, including those that have costered American lives.

The group and its allies have turned to kidnapping to raise money in recent years, using ransoms among Filipinos and US security officials that ransom payments could reach the group, which has been weakened by years of US-backed operations.

It is believed to have raised more than $5 million last year through ransoms. At Marikina, Quezon and Jolo is 45, police, Inspector Aliboncan

Nonviolent struggle ends in murder

By Ryan D. Brumby

No murder is ever justifiable. But to kill a man who is a staunch advocate of peaceful means to protect and push for the rights of peasants, one who has never lifted a finger to hurt anyone, makes his murder ruthless, senseless and brutal.'

AFTER TEARING DOWN A half-century-old fence, a group of 55 farmers broke into the 50-hectare piece of property in South Africa owned by the apartheid government in Johannesburg that food giant South African Corp. (SANC) loaned over to them an March 29 last year.

Overwhelmed by emotion, their leader, Phisoiso Molea, said he was "crying, shouting and screaming" as he led the group into the farm and scooped a handful of soil. "We are crying tears of joy," he said.

But Molea and the other 54 farmers, though now free, did not leave the state-owned farm. Instead, they entered into a 10-year lease agreement with the government of South Africa for the use of the land.

Although they were awarded 144 hectares of prime farmland under the 1994 land reform act, the new farmers were given only 50 hectares to farm and worked over 12 years for that to happen.

Their return possession to their land came 20 years after the end of apartheid in South Africa. In 1974, the government had taken the land from the white farmers who had owned it.

BE FLU-LESS,
NOT CLUELESS!

Tomorrow, June 15, the De La Salle University campus reopens.

The University assures all its stakeholders, especially parents and students, that it is exerting all efforts to contain the spread of the Influenza A (H1N1) virus from the cases already confirmed.

- DLSU has prepared extensively for this eventuality, saturating all communication channels with information on preventing the spread of the virus before classes began in May.
- The University is strictly following all protocols required by the Department of Health and the World Health Organization, communicating with all possible contacts of the confirmed cases as part of a comprehensive approach to the containment of the virus.
- DLSU has a continuing campus-wide sanitation process to keep the campus a safe and conducive place for learning.
- The Department of Health has noted that the positive cases in the University were all mild, and that they have either recovered or on their way to full recovery. Be that as it may, we continue our extensive information campaign on the various ways to prevent and manage the spread of the virus.

Thank you for your continued confidence in De La Salle University.

Be flu-less, not clueless!
Information is your best protection.

Swine flu cases in RP climb to 111

By Dana Perleberg

NINETEEN NEW CONFIRMED CASES OF THE A(H1N1) influenza virus, including 11 students of an elementary school in Jaro, Nueva Ecija province, were reported yesterday by the Department of Health (DOH), bringing the total in the country to 111.

Twelve students of the Jaramba Elementary School, including one case previously identified, with a total population of 170, were confirmed to have been informed, although none have traveled abroad. Other students and their household contacts with influenza-like symptoms are still under observation.

The DOH said the 19 new cases—11 males and 8 females—were all mild to severe. They range from 6 to 40 years old, and all live in the Philippines.

The DOH, meanwhile, proposed to implement a plan to conserve resources to protect vulnerable and high-risk groups, rather than trying to stop the spread of the virus.

Health Secretary Francisco

Duque III said they will now shift to a policy of mitigation, from the current policy of containment, since the World Health Organization (WHO) already declared it a pandemic alert.

"A policy of mitigation means the DOH will now focus on preparing households and health facilities to respond to the challenge posed by A(H1N1) in anticipation of more confirmed cases," he added.

"We have to make sure our health systems are equipped to meet and manage potentially severe cases that may require more intensive care in our hospitals and that could cause an approximately 50 percent fatality rate," he stated.

Duque reiterated that, based on the WHO's global assessment, the A(H1N1) virus "causes very mild symptoms and takes a self-limiting course in the overwhelming majority of patients, mostly those who have no pre-existing conditions."

He said the DOH has to focus more on patients with pre-existing disease-like diabetes, heart and renal diseases. The program, the very young and the elderly, and those with tuberculosis like HIV/AIDS and cancer.

He said such high-risk patients should immediately seek a doctor as soon as they develop the like symptoms.

Through mitigation, Duque said they want to slow down the spread of the virus while strengthening surveillance and response in the most vulnerable groups. Improving preparedness to care for severe cases and to maintain the disruption of social activities and other negative consequences.

Internet for Public High Schools

Not just another school opening: as PLDT and SMART answer DepEd's call for connectivity

Something exciting is in store for public high school students this school year. Education Secretary Jesli A. Lapus recently signed DepEd Order 30 which launched the department's Internet connectivity project, requiring all public high schools to get an Internet subscription within school year 2009-2010.

DepEd, PLDT and the Philippine Business for Social Progress signed the agreement of the Smart Schools Program that aims to launch the Internet connectivity project in all public high schools. DepEd Secretary Jesli A. Lapus, PLDT President and CEO, and SMART President and CEO are seen in the photo.

The Philippine Long Distance Telephone (PLDT) Company and Smart Communications, Inc. (SMART) have been quick to respond. Both have lowered their regular Internet subscription plans to meet the budget allocated by the Department of Education (DepEd) per school.

At the same time, the PLDT Group is gearing up to provide the broadband connectivity requirements of public high schools nationwide with its wide range of communication solutions that include wired, wireless and satellite services through subsidiary Malabon Satellite Corporation.

"PLDT and SMART fully support government's vision of a public school education empowered by the Internet," says Rogelito L. Nazareno, PLDT and SMART President and CEO. "Broadbanding public schools is a big part of our Internet for All advocacy, which is manifested in the Smart Schools Program."

Launched in 2004, the Smart Schools Program (SSP) is SMART's flagship community service initiative that promotes ICT in basic education through partnerships with public schools, its officials and parents-teachers-community associations (PTCA).

To date, some 250 public schools nationwide are enjoying Internet connectivity through the PLDT group's wide range of communication solutions, access to online content and teacher training. An additional 50 public high schools under the Commission on Information and Communications Technology's Schools Project also enjoy the same benefits through SSP.

Backed by the nation's leading telcos in the fixed and wireless business, DepEd is assured of the needed support to have all public high schools in the country gain access to the global resource of information and educational opportunities afforded by the World Wide Web.

UN urged to hike Security Council membership

By Cynthia D. Balboa

PHILIPPINE PRESIDENT ARROYO called on the United Nations in New York last week to hike Security Council membership to 15 members to speed the process of reforming the UN Security Council.

In his intervention during the 22nd annual meeting of the General Assembly on the environment, Arroyo urged the UN Security Council to take more steps to reform the UN Security Council.

He urged the UN to take more steps to reform the UN Security Council, which he said is the most powerful organ of the world body.

"The only way forward is not to go back again and again, but to take steps, all steps, to reform the UN Security Council," he said.

Arroyo, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, said the UN Security Council should be reformed to be more effective in dealing with the world's most serious problems.

In March 2005, former United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan proposed the expansion of the Security Council to 24 members to be split into two groups of 12 and 12.

A similar plan, another proposal was made by a group of countries called "Group of 15" which called for an increase in the number of permanent members to 15.

Arroyo said the amendments he proposed would increase the number of permanent members from five to 12 and the non-permanent members from 10 to 18.

He proposed that the new permanent members should be composed of one each from Africa, Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean and one each from Eastern Europe and Western Europe and other areas.

Monument to RP to rise in Israel

THE "OPEN DOORS" MONUMENT, the first Philippine structure to be built in Israel, will be inaugurated on June 27 to commemorate the "open doors" policy and the determination of the Philippine government through President Manuel A. Quinsion to give Israelites an opportunity to return to their homeland.

According to the Israeli embassy in Manila, the statue marked another milestone for the cordial ties between the two countries.

Israeli Secretary Joseph Ben-David will be the guest of honor at the inauguration ceremony at the Ben-Zion Lachish Underground Memorial Park.

Through President Quinsion's open doors policy in 1979, thousands of Jews migrated to Israel, leaving and found refuge in the Philippines.

The embassy said the statue symbolizes the Filipino people's solidarity with the Jewish people in their quest for a homeland.

Monuments of such significance were dedicated by Frank Pineson, a Holocaust survivor himself, in his book "Temple in Manila."

In 2005, the book literally opened the doors for the creation of the "Open Doors" monument through the initiative of former Ambassador to Israel Norberto Modona, who died in Manila in February 2007. Cynthia D. Balboa

Giving back, Ayala style

By Tina Arnes-Davies

IT IS NO ACCIDENT THAT THE Ayala group of companies is today's stable, largest and most profitable conglomerate with leading market positions in real estate development, banking, telecommunications, retail distribution, alternative manufacturing, business process outsourcing and automotive dealership.

By looking well into the future and taking measured and yet confident steps, the group was able to seize opportunities as they inevitably arose through out its 175-year history, reflecting to be steered down by some classic events such as two world wars and the post-war and Philippine revolutions.

Thus, the group has come a long way from the small trading house called Ayala y Cia set up in 1834 by the first generation of crisscrossed families, who came from Spain to work their business in the Philippines, into the diversified group it is today with the reins firmly held by the eighth generation of leaders.

And from the day Ayala y Cia was established, the group never lost sight of the principle that it wants its valuable resources in the Philippines who put their hard-earned money in its wide range of products and services.

This is why as the group expanded, its way of giving back to the country and the people with whom its history is inextricably linked did not.

In fact, Ayala projects were philanthropic in nature, with money going into a number of worthy causes starting with the establishment by Don Marcellino de Ayala of the Colegio de la Inmaculada Concepcion in 1856, an exclusive school for girls that exists to this day, which was followed in 1918 by the company's founding of National Ayala Presidencia, Nacional's first education in Europe and the development of low-cost housing and cottage industries for the poor that were widely needed in the aftermath of World War II.

Then in 1961, with the group now firmly entrenched as a member of industries vital to the Philippines' economic growth such as banking and real estate, the group decided to go even further into its social development work and organized a new Ayala Foundation, the purpose of which was to

Under Philippine Foundation, the country's first corporate foundation, the group provided land in 1965 for the site of the Asian Institute of Management, one of the leading higher education centers in the region and then in 1974 opened the Ayala Museum, with its museum's store of archaeological finds and an outdoor, to the public.

More projects congruent with the Philippine Foundation's vision to help improve the lives of the less privileged followed in quick succession. Its work reached a turning point in 1986, following the Ayala Foundation's decision that now the Philippines return to the democracy with the spirit to govern of President Corason C. Aquino.

Jaime Ayala, the current chair and CEO of Ayala Corp., recalls the excitement to the company when the Philippines looked in the glory of regaining a democracy without dropping a single drop of blood at the city street.

"The democratic transition after 1986 created an impulse and an opportunity for a company like Ayala to increase its contribution to nation building. Rediscover Manila—aboard a Pasig River cruise

After the sights and sounds, there's food—stripping in Binondo

By Norman Ledesma de Leon
Lead Staff

"THE SONG OF THE PASIG RIVER today makes the state of the country, the state of the river, the state of the people of the country. It might take a generation to make it happen, but the river, and the country, can be transformed," said Tourism Secretary Eric Alvarado as he observed the river from the deck of the Pasig River Ferry. Dennis recently took the ferry as part of the launch of a new tourism program. Thanks to a partnership between Philstar, an association of tour operators that exclusively promotes in-bound and domestic tourism, and Department of Tourism and ABS-CBN's "Pasig River on the Fly" project, visitors can now see the Pasig River "in one and explore Manila."

Alternative

Providing an alternative to the more conventional tour package trips to Luneta, the National Museum or Intramuros, this new program is centered on the development of "Beyond the Lines." Its first route, "Things Every Cruise and Biondo Culture Walking Tour" is just the beginning.

The ferryboat cruise will start at the station in Mandaluyong and end in Binondo. In 2009, the six scheduled, 100-passenger boat passes historical sites such as Intramuros, Luneta and Binondo. An additional dock is also available for those who want fresh air and a glimpse of water after visiting the city.

Starting in September, the proposed multi-day package tours will be shown onshore on all ferries with seats, with historical facts and stories shared in each particular area of interest as pointed by the ferry.

A guide from the Malabon Quater group, the DOT's highly-trained team of tour guides, will meet the groups at the station and conduct a three-hour walking tour of the Highlights of Binondo.

The tour provides historical background and insight on what life was like in Binondo, with visits to streets such as Escolta, Tomas Pagsanjan, Quinsig, Pagsanjan, Gonsales and Pagsanjan.

A link to a local Philippine-Chinese temple is also included. To provide a hands-on experience, the guides and narrators of this walking tour will discuss the history and culture of the area, and the role of the Chinese in the development of Binondo.

Walking through Binondo, the tour is unique in that it goes to the Pasig River as a means to transport local and foreign visitors to the heart of what was once "Manila."

managers, the staff, and the location. Between the gorgeous views, spring rolls, beachside massages and cabanas, I had a tough time finding space for my favorite dish, a spaghetti pizza with extra cheese.

The Shuang-La is located over 12 km to the southern part of the island, with its own 200-m of private beachfront. Developed by the Hong Kong-based Shuang-La Group and owned by (www.shuang-la.com), this Pacific Island luxury hotel group, the Boracay resort is one of 62 hotels under the Shuang-La Group, with hotels and resorts all over the world, from Austria to the United Kingdom and across every level in between.

More impressive

Even more impressive is the fact that this group has five hotels in operation. It's a testament to their faith in the Philippines.

Getting world-class developers to invest in our country is no mean feat and it is remarkable when they bring their international expertise and this is with Filipino roots like to create a familiar experience. From the glowing phrase about great real estate, to ensure that the island's best assets would not be harmed, and that the growth of natural assets would be respected.

Thus, the Shuang-La has an Eco Center, the first ever in all of Shuang-La. The Center provides an environment where guests can learn about the local flora and fauna through a series of displays and activities. More Eco Centers are planned for Shuang-La's resorts in Maldives and the Maldives.

At the Eco Center, I learned about the island's efforts in maintaining and restoring the Shuang-La Reef and Shuang-La Reef Marine Park. I also got to see this up-close and personal when I had the chance to go scuba diving with Melissa Ledesma, Shuang-La's resident scuba instructor. The scuba facilities at the resort are first-class, provided by Shuang-La's scuba manager and scuba spots at Shuang-La Reef.

The eco theme extends to the management of the resort itself. The Shuang-La has over 300 solar water heaters and is building a sewage treatment plant to support its water needs. It already employs 100 volunteers of water daily but will eventually be able to reuse 10 times that amount. An environmental intent is a key reason in Shuang-La's overall development. It was great to learn all this at the Eco Center.

Of course, my kids were in no mood for education but were up for the other "E" Center in the resort: the Entertainment Center. This center, with the adjoining Adventure Zone, is an ideal vacation spot for families. And, indeed, explained that since then they got one or two more kids a year, they learned to make sure that kids would always find something to do in the resort. Thus, the Entertainment Center has everything imaginable from Wii rooms to billiard tables.

Of course, the Shuang-La side has a Cha Cha Cha, the signature amenity of the island, for those looking for some more indulgent and pampering, and various spas and bars throughout the resort.

The best part of any vacation, of course, is that there are always fun activities for the kids. Until September 30, their "Kids-on-Us" allows children under 12 to run, play and stay for free. There's also a lot of fun to be had at the resort, and with enough breakfast, lunch and dinner from the Shuang-La chef's menu.

SHANG Boracay resort with the friendly resort staff

Nature recreational facilities such as the Adventure Zone, scuba, jet skiing, beachside fishing and canoeing and sailing can also be enjoyed at no charge. Guests are also rewarded with a complimentary meal for a night. So far, we had a very particular Shuang-La resort within our group. When a way to go to know Shuang-La's exceptional luxury hotel and more about the Shuang-La Boracay Resort and Spa, by calling 091-204-0001.

It is the experience really up to the hotel. Shuang-La has the best resort in Boracay. Find out more at 5:25 p.m., when GMA's "Home Life" features Shuang-La Boracay Resort and Spa.

OFWs in Hong Kong welcome San Lorenzo Ruiz

AT LEAST A THOUSAND OFWs lined up for the Association Church's Feast Day, Hong Kong, to welcome San Lorenzo Ruiz during the Mass celebrated by Fr. Luis Nuncio, SVI, principal of St. Jude Catholic School in Manila, and Fr. Edil Lim, SVI, chaplain of the Filipino community in Hong Kong.

It was like a coming home for San Lorenzo Ruiz, the first Filipino saint, who himself was an enormous source of pride to Nuncio in Manila. The feast with a band of Dominican friars attending to evangelize Japan and other parts of the world. OFWs' devotion to the feast of the Asian (Asian saints) and the feast of the saints in the Philippines, especially St. Philippine, St. Clare and St. Isidoro, has the saints carried by laborers in the Philippines and San Lorenzo Ruiz, the first Filipino saint, who himself was an enormous source of pride to Nuncio in Manila.

Speaking from the Holy See, Nuncio, secretary of the San Lorenzo Ruiz Global Ministry, I mentioned at the service that he brought to Hong Kong. There was a vigil in Manila the day before we left on June 5. The vigil was in all the cities, especially St. Philippine, St. Clare and St. Isidoro. But the vigil was improved in Hong Kong. Joe Castillo and Donald Rodriguez of the Philippine Overseas Labor Office (PULO) visited at the airport early in the morning. They said to the Association Church where San Lorenzo Ruiz, 09090, Nuncio.

Fr. Edil Lim, who takes care of the spiritual formation of OFWs and Filipino migrants, expressed the devotion of the saints to the feast of the OFWs. Said he that the feast will be brought around in the various Filipino organizations and churches in Hong Kong. He said he will be permanent in place.

Twitter (or how you can now officially let your life pass you by)

Amid the hype is a freaky question—Are you, in a sense, stalking yourself and other people?

By Dennis Clemente
 Columnist

NEW YORK—LET'S SEE: You have Facebook and other social networking sites so you can keep up with "friends" you don't know. You have RSS feeders on top of your news aggregators. You have video TV streaming online. You have cable services with 200 channels, 40 in HD and 40 hours of recorded shows you haven't watched. You have iPhone apps and podcast subscriptions and music you downloaded illegally but not bothered to listen to. You have book online and P2P games. You have Internet on your phone.

When did we also—oh, yes! We!

What else can you waste your time with these days? We almost forgot—there's Twitter, a social networking utility you can use in any connected in real time. By real time, we mean you can now officially let your life pass you by in real time.

And you know why you will use it? Because everybody thinks it's cool, well, at least the mainstream media makes you think it's cool.

Some thought, the marketing world will catch up and sell you anything from milk-soothing products to Viagra.

You saw about Oprah for real estate? It has been reported that a million people have signed up and many a blog listed to Herndon-Lee suggest that Oprah's endorsement of the service has generated a 40 percent lift in real estate over the past few weeks, even if she is not following.

Master of time

So it's just a matter of time before all of us go Twittering? Well, not so fast. David Martin, VP primary research at Nielsen Online, notes in the Nielsen Briefing that "currently, more than 40 percent of US Twitter users fail to tweet the following month, or in other words, Twitter's audience retention rate, or the percentage of a phone month's users who come back the following month, is currently about 40 percent."

Another compelling argument against it is its current low penetration rate. "It will only reach about 10 percent of online non-smokers," says Martin. So hold on to those media bags.

Focus on the non-hearing

By Maribel Cruz

"THEY HEAR THE WORLD" arrives with a capital D. They find the terror hearing-impaired and "deaf" audience. They don't like being scared at. And they appreciate music.

As deafness spread among filmmaker Mike Sanchez told Entertainment Weekly, he learned while writing and filming his new thriller-horror film, "They Hear the World" (R) 11:30am What Not, Inc., about the struggles of being deaf.

The movie is an official entry to the 2009 Cineplexis Philippine Independent Film Festival, which runs from July 17 to 28 at the Cultural Center of the Philippines in Manila City.

Difficult subject

"Deaf people want respect. Many consider them inferior, so they fight back by inventing weapons closer their situation," said Sanchez.

People close to him advised Sanchez against doing the film because of the "difficult" subject. "I'm not sure how this movie will be received. I'm just offering an alternative," the director said. Sanchez earlier forged "Dead as Day," which won the Cineplexis Best Film Award in 2006.

"They Hear the World" is the love story of a deaf boy (Shaneille Malabon) who loves to dance and a hearing-impaired girl (Dea Sanchez) who shares her hearing. Growing up in a hearing camp the movie deaf and hearing kids, they find that they have many things in common, including a love for music.

The film is inspired by the story of filmmaker Francis, who was in a mental institution for deaf people. "The idea bridged the gap between deaf and hearing people," the director said. "I thought of making him play himself in the movie, but he's a very intense person."

A friend's story

"They Hear the World" is the first Filipino film to have a deaf as the main lead role. Malabon has acted in several theater productions and is a trained dancer in both modern and contemporary. "I'm amazed by Francis' (Malabon's) vision," he says. "It's as if I made the film for him."

The other deaf actors in the movie are Francis Malabon, Cathy Joy Paraiso and Joy Joy Baccan, and dancers from The Jolly Tumbuk ng Pilipinas (JTP) and DASH-CHS. Music steps Dance Troupe. Playing the heroine is Sanchez's daughter Dee, who debuted in "Falling Out."

It was tough remembering and writing the story, admitted Sanchez. "The deaf culture is so different from the norm. I have deaf people as advisors. Being with them changes your perspective. You realize that they are capable of doing in words...and some of us are aware of it."

Tight budget

Sanchez added that working on a tight budget is also proving to be a challenge. "Most of the scenes were shot in Tagalog. It's problematic, logistically. Fortunately I have a lot of deaf people there who let me shoot for free. Not for long time."

Does he feel he should use the success of "Dead as Day"? "I try not to think about the awards. I'm just trying to see. Making my own feature. But I can say I'm proud to be in this year's festival," he said.

Both movies are May Lopez, 11:30am, WB Theatrical and together are also featured in the movie. Sanchez is also a leader ("What Not Music") in the Cineplexis 2009 short feature category.
